You Will When You Believe!

I was once frightened of the HKDSE Exam. However, I am grateful that now I have overcome this huge challenge! Like all my classmates, since the day we swore to enter the universities, we had made up our mind to give all we had to go forward, and no turning back. Comradeship had fueled our efforts; and I know: it had also built our courage and determination. The common saying, 'you reap what you sow' definitely pays off because I have striven for my best. The HKDSE Exam result is an approval of my effort and an encouragement of my future development. Every sleepy night I have endured to prepare for the exams, and every dawn I have spent to finish my notes are not in vain. Yet I also know: my confidence, and thus the resultant determination has been critically crucial. And they will be even more valuable for my future.

Examination result, undoubtedly an approval of one's endeavor, can never really determine one's destiny; but your belief will. 'You will when you believe', once quite far-fetching to me, is a song which I have come to treasure now. Through the ups and downs in the examinations, I realize that being confident in myself has been a strong motivation. This is the most invaluable gift I am thankful for, apart from the pleasing results. Thanks to My LORD: Jesus Christ has kept me and brought me to a new height for future challenges.
